Stuart Malcolm Young was born in 1890. He was the grandson of Latter Day Saints pioneer, Brigham Young.

Young served as the expedition photographer on Byron Cummings' Utah Expedition of Rainbow Bridge in 1909 and 1912. This expedition remains significant because the group discovered Keet Seel and Inscription House. Young served as a mining engineer in Utah for 15 years, and later moved to Los Banos, California, where he managed a J.C. Penney. He later owned his own department store in Chowchilla, California.

He passed away in 1972 in Chowchilla.

Scope and Content

Collection consists of images of Monument Valley, Tsegi Canyon, Kayenta, Marsh Pass, and Navajo people. Hopi images of the Snake Dance at Oraibi and the Flute Dance at Mishongovi are also included.
